

Bank of America Turned “Weapons-Related” Purchase Data Over to the Feds

According to a recent Fox News report, Bank of America secretly turned over hundreds of its customers’ personal data to the federal government following the unrest at the Capitol on January 6. The targeted customers included those who made purchases at “weapons-related merchants” in early January. The report suggested that the nation’s second largest bank turned the private information over voluntarily rather than in response to a subpoena. Bank of America’s willing collaboration with federal law enforcement at the expense of its customers highlights the broad threat posed by those that would commandeer ostensibly private banks and payment processors to undermine Second Amendment rights.

According to Fox, at the behest of federal investigators, Bank of America swept its transaction records for individuals who met the following criteria:

1. Customers confirmed as transacting, either through bank account debit card or credit card purchases in Washington, D.C. between 1/5 and 1/6.
2. Purchases made for Hotel/Airbnb RSVPs in DC, VA, and MD after 1/6.
3. Any purchase of weapons or at a weapons-related merchant between 1/7 and their upcoming suspected stay in D.C. area around Inauguration Day.
4. Airline related purchases since 1/6.

This resulted in the identification of 211 Bank of America customers, whose data was then turned over to the federal government without their knowledge. Fox News noted that at least one of the identified individuals was subsequently interviewed by federal authorities and cleared of any wrongdoing.

This gross abuse of trust reveals how financial service companies collaborating with federal law enforcement can erode gun owners’ rights and statutory protections preventing the federal government’s retention of gun owner data.

Federal law explicitly prohibits the federal government from compiling certain data on gun owners. The Firearms Owners’ Protection Act of 1986 amended the Gun Control Act to protect gun owners from the threat of registration. The legislation added language stating,

No such rule or regulation prescribed after the date of the enactment of the Firearms Owners’ Protection Act may require that records required to be maintained under this chapter or any portion of the contents of such records, be recorded at or transferred to a facility owned, managed, or controlled by the United States or any State or any political subdivision thereof, nor that any system of registration of firearms, firearms owners, or firearms transactions or dispositions be established.

The Brady Act of 1993, which provided for the establishment of the National Instant Criminal Background Check System, made clear the NICS cannot be used to create a firearms registry. The language states that the NICS must “destroy all records of the system with respect to the call (other than the identifying number and the date the number was assigned) and all records of the system relating to the person or the transfer.” Further, the Brady Act prohibited any “department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States” from requiring any record generated by the NICS to be retained or to use the system to establish a firearms registry.

The federal government deputizing willing banks to compile and hand over information on law-abiding gun owners that is comparable to data they would be prohibited from compiling themselves is a direct attack on the privacy that these statutory protections were intended to preserve.

This isn’t the first time the federal government has used the acquiescent banking sector to push outcomes gun control advocates could not achieve through legitimate means.

In 2013 the Justice Department and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation initiated Operation Choke Point, which sought to deter banks from conducting business with companies that engaged in commerce that the Obama administration viewed as undesirable. To do this, the Obama administration categorized certain types of businesses as being “associated with high-risk activity” in a banking guidance document used by the FDIC. Some of the types of businesses targeted by the operation were engaged in illegal or fraudulent activity, like “On-line Gambling” or “Ponzi Schemes.” However, the operation also targeted legal businesses that engaged in lawful commerce such as “Tobacco Sales,” “Coin Dealers,” “Ammunition Sales,” and “Firearms Sales.”

The Trump administration put an end to the federal government’s organized financial harassment campaign in 2017. However, er, some lawmakers, including U.S. Rep. Carolyn Maloney (D-N.Y.), have continued to bully banks in an attempt to force them to cut ties with the firearms industry.

This continued assault prompted NRA to support a Trump era rule from the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) aimed at ending politically-motivated discrimination in the provision of financial services. Exposing their zeal for political discrimination in banking, on January 28 the Biden administration put a hold on this vital measure.

Moreover, gun control advocates have tried to directly commandeer banks and payment processors in an attempt to attack gun owners.

On December 24, 2019 the gun confiscation supporters at the New York Times ran a thinly-veiled advocacy piece by Andrew Ross Sorkin in the news section, titled, "Devastating Arsenal, Bought With Plastic and Nary a Red Flag." According to Sorkin, banks and other financial services companies are "uniquely positioned" to monitor gun owner purchasing habits. Under Sorkin's preferred scenario, credit card companies would require retailers to tag firearms-related purchases with additional data that could be used by the credit card companies to compile information on gun owners. The surveillance data could then be used to flag suspicious purchases for law enforcement.

On April 30, 2018, the Wall Street Journal reported that "[b]anks and credit-card companies are discussing ways to identify purchases of guns in their payment systems." Elaborating, the paper explained, The financial companies have explored creating a new credit-card code for firearms dealers, similar to how they code restaurants or department stores, according to people familiar with the matter. Another idea would require merchants to share information about specific firearm products consumers are buying, some of the people said.

Such data could allow banks to restrict purchases at certain businesses or monitor them.

More recently, Moms Demand Action Founder Shannon Watts encouraged the payment processing industry to restrict what gun owners can buy. According to Watts, credit card companies should refuse to process payments for certain firearms parts - preventing law-abiding gun owners from purchasing lawful products.

Given Bank of America and federal law enforcement's recent conduct, it would be reasonable for gun owners to assume that the federal government would have unfettered access to any data collected under gun controllers' proposed banking and payment processing schemes.

NRA-ILA has been at the forefront of confronting governmental and private efforts to attack gun owners and the gun industry through banking and payment processing. NRA-ILA will continue to work with our friends in congress, including members of the Senate Banking Committee, to ensure that gun owners and the gun industry have access to financial services free from privacy abuses and political retribution.

Biden Begins Gun Control Push

President Biden used the three-year anniversary of the criminal attack in Parkland, Florida to call "on Congress to enact commonsense gun law reforms, including requiring background checks on all gun sales, banning assault weapons and high-capacity magazines, and eliminating immunity for gun manufacturers who knowingly put weapons of war on our streets."

There is nothing "commonsense" about restricting the rights of law-abiding Americans in the hope that just one more law will be the thing to stop a determined criminal. Requiring "universal" background checks wouldn't reduce crime, but it would make criminals out of law-abiding gun owners. Targeting "assault weapons" and "high-capacity magazines" would eliminate some of the most popular firearms that law-abiding Americans choose to defend themselves and their families, despite the fact that these firearms are rarely used in crime. And, eliminating the Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act would completely destroy the right to keep and bear arms.

Biden's statement does mark the administration's first official push for gun control. However, this should come as little surprise to anyone who has been paying attention to Biden's increasingly hostile position towards the rights of American gun owners.

During his campaign, the gun policy page of the Biden campaign site looked like a shopping list for anti-gun extremists. And, it's hard to forget his unhinged attack on a pro-Second Amendment auto worker last year. Not to mention that just before taking office, Biden vowed to "defeat" the five million members of the NRA.

The White House's announcement was also unsurprising as it came only days after meeting with gun control groups. Many of these groups seem desperate for gun control to remain in the spotlight given Americans' rejection of their messaging. A "problem" the groups themselves have even acknowledged.

Yet, despite the repeated rejection of anti-gun policies by the American people, the Biden Administration had decided to forge ahead with these unpopular and unconstitutional policies. Now it's more important than ever for all gun owners to be informed and engaged in the legislative process. If you haven't already, make sure that you're signed up for NRA-ILA's Email Updates to ensure that you have up-to-date information on Biden's gun control plan and any other actions that could impact your rights.

"These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman."

LIBERTY NOTES

By Kevin L. Jamison

It is a Good Day for Liberty.

Smithsonian Folkways is a part of the Smithsonian Institute, America's Museum. I notice that they have many albums of protest music. As a member of one of the great protest movements of our time I cannot object. However much of this music is decidedly left-wing. This is part of our history and should be preserved. We preserve unpleasant images of the "late unpleasantness" in our history. I notice that Smithsonian Folkways does not feature songs of that period, of either side.

With all the music greats on the NRA Board we still do not have a collection of gun rights songs. We could follow an old American tradition of putting new words to old songs. The Star-Spangled Banner was put to an old drinking song; very American. We could put our own words to a commercial jingle, the MacDonald's commercial for example.

I've noticed that feral cats are dangerous, feral dogs are dangerous, feral hogs are dangerous. They are more dangerous than species that originated in the wild. Perhaps contact with humans' generations ago makes them not afraid of us, and perhaps a little angry at us. There are feral humans as well, no human connection but a residual hatred. That why we own guns.

The NRA bankruptcy continues. It appears that the plan is not to move the headquarters to Texas, only the charter. There have been counter-filings. The New York state attorney general filed to dismiss based on a statement from the NRA that it has never been in better financial condition. The NRA statement may be just propaganda. Financial condition is an accounting trick. There have been proposals to move the NRA charter from New York State before. In the book "Inside the NRA" Joshua Powell says that it was not done before because, he says, we could not take the NRA logo and other symbols with us. This is the sort of statement which begs for explanation; but he does not. So far, the bankruptcy progresses. If it gets the NRA out of New York, that would be great. There is also a motion by a former Director to appoint an examiner to look at the NRA's accounts and operation. This will be of value to the membership.

"Inside the NRA" has been touted as the ultimate revelation. The author claims to be pro-gun. He gives a good defense of semi-automatic weapons. But says that we must compromise. He repeatedly states that the NRA must "go back" to its original purpose of a sporting and marksmanship organization. He also says that no program ever begun by the NRA has ever been ended. He says that Wayne's statement that the only thing that stops a bad guy with a gun is a good guy with a gun is not true. He also says that the NRA headquarters is full of armed employees and a very bad place for an active killer. He does not explain any of these contradictory statements. He does not explain his continual claim that the NRA must compromise. The NRA has compromised on every gun control scheme in the last century. From the pistol and revolver act of 1922 to the "bump stock" ban it compromised; and got nothing in return. What we must do is demand that the usual suspects tell us what gun-rights they will never come after, if someone else comes for those remnant rights will they stand with us to defend them and finally, why should we believe them?

The book does describe an incoherent NRA organization. The author, a business major in college, describes NRA programs as fiefdoms constantly at war with each other for resources. The "safe School" program is described as a "Ferrari in the garage" an excellent program that was never implemented. He says that he got it into schools. He describes Wayne LA Pierre as a hands off leader who does not communicate with his staff or program heads. If true, this is no way to run a railroad. The author was the personal assistant to Wayne LaPierre. He claims to have inspired the NRA self-defense "insurance" program. I would not brag about starting that ill-conceived program. It only paid off after acquittal. Until the jury came back "not guilty" you were on your own. There are many such programs trying to get you to sign up. Read the fine print.

As I write this the temperature is below zero, Fahrenheit. I just finished an audiobook called "The Coldest Winter" which is a fictionalized account of the Marines fighting their way out of the Chosen Reservoir in Korea. Vastly outnumbered, the enemy on the hills above them, they fought their way out on frozen feet in temperatures of thirty below. It is a legendary battle by the USMC, which seems to collect such legends. The author mentions the Chinese soldiers who fought the same battle and were found frozen to death in their positions, or living Chinese found with their hands frozen to their weapons. The Chinese motivated their men with a political officer system which convinced the men that they were the spearhead of history and they were liberating the world. I know because I did a paper on this system when I was in college. The Marines did not have such a system but devoutly believed that as Marines they could and would prevail.

President Biden spent Valentine's Day demanding that congress pass gun restrictions. He had a meeting with the usual suspects who seemed to have been encouraged. However certain inner city anti-gun groups denounced them as racist because of white leadership. That may be an opportunity for us. The African American Gun Association is increasing in membership. There is some anticipation that President Biden will issue executive orders against our rights. The Second Amendment Foundation has promised to take him to court if he does.

The Missouri legislature has passed the Second Amendment Protection Act. This prohibits state law enforcement from cooperating with federal anti-gun actions. It will now go on to the Senate.

A bill in the legislature will allow persons with a license to carry on buses. This ban is a handicap for persons unable to afford a car or for some reason cannot drive. We should at least get this passed this year.

The US Concealed Carry Association has postponed its Expo until 1-3 October, 2021 at the Ft. Worth Convention Center in Ft. Worth Texas. Persons with tickets for the earlier date will have their tickets transferred to the new date. Persons who cannot make the new date can get a refund. These expos offer seminars in self-defense and exhibit the latest in holsters and other equipment. I have enjoyed them enormously.

The Henry .22 rifle in our drawing has been won. We are looking for another firearm for the next drawing. Carl Smart suggested muzzle-loading cannon. The cannon had no provision for a bayonet so I rejected it out of hand. I ordered the rest of the Board to reject it out of hand; and everyone had a good laugh. We looked at a Ruger 10-22 with a kit that made it look like a tommy gun. It had no provision for a bayonet, but it looked like a tommy gun. Unfortunately, they are no longer made. We are looking for alternatives. We raised a fair amount of money with the Henry .22. We are not married to the idea of a firearm with a bayonet, but I like them. We need to have a drawing because that is how we raise money. Given the new administration we shall need the money. There will be lawsuits and we may be called upon to assist.

We have to get a new lobbyist. We have been spoiled for many years by Kerry Messer. He is retiring and we must find another. Lobbyists know the players and how the game is played. They know when hearings will be held in time for us to appear. Showing up is important.

In the words of two great time travelers, "Be excellent to each other!"

We shall overcome.

HB 52 -- FIREARMS ON PUBLIC TRANSIT SPONSOR: Schnelting

Currently, it is a crime to board a bus with a dangerous or deadly weapon or carry such a weapon in a terminal. This bill allows a concealed carry permit holder to lawfully carry firearms on public transportation, as defined in the bill. Anyone with a permit may also carry a firearm while traveling by bus. A person with or without a permit may transport a firearm in a non-functioning state by bus if ammunition is not available. This bill does not apply to property of Amtrak or any partnership in which Amtrak engages.

Hearing have been held by the General Laws and Rules Committee's and both voted DO PASS.

Call you State Representative and urge them to vote FOR this bill.

HB 212 -- FIREARMS IN MOTOR VEHICLES SPONSOR: Hill

This bill allows firearm owners to transport and store firearms in privately owned, locked vehicles in parking garages, parking lots, and parking spaces. Property owners, tenants, employers, and business entities are exempt from both civil and criminal liability for any occurrences involving these firearms and the entity may require firearms to be kept in a locked case and hidden from view if stored in a vehicle. An employer may ban employee firearms from vehicles owned or leased by the employer. An employer and business may ban firearms from certain limited access parking areas if storage areas for firearms are made available to the employee or customer, or if alternative parking areas are provided that are reasonably close to the business or employer.

The General Laws Committee has held hearings on this bill and it was voted DO PASS. It is not sent to Rules Committee for hearings. No information on hearings for this bill now.

Please call you State Representative and urge them to support HB 212.

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

BOLT ACTIONS

K. L. Jamison

In 1967 a man in New York City bought a bolt-action rifle. He was shooting at trash in the bay. A bullet skipped off the water like a flat rock skips across a pond. It killed a woman driving on the other side of the bay a mile away. Because of the extreme range the police thought they had a crazed sniper. They found the guy who pulled the trigger and brought him in front of the Grand Jury. Grand Juries only hear from prosecutors, so they do pretty much what the prosecutor says. This one did not find any criminal action but went on to say, "We are shocked to discover such deadly implements are so readily available in our society." This was used as an excuse to register rifles and shotguns in the City. They are now using this registration to confiscate rifles and shotguns; although they promised they never would.

This was not the only outrage perpetrated with a manually operated rifle. President Kennedy was shot with a bolt-action rifle with a telescopic sight. In 1966 Charles Witman climbed into the tower at the University of Texas and killed eleven people and wounded 31 with a bolt-action hunting rifle with a telescopic sight. Reverend Martin Luther King was murdered with a 30-06 Remington 760 Gamemaster pump-action rifle with telescopic sight. The Gamemaster has been described as a "military-grade" rifle and even an "assault rifle." There have been others.

When the usual suspects sate themselves with our semi-automatic rifles, shotguns and handguns I do not expect them to retire. They have established organizations whose purpose in life is to ban guns and other weapons. Such organizations do not die and never, never, admit that they were wrong. Anti-gun figures in Britain are going after antiques and BB guns and kitchen knives.

It will take only one notorious shooting for the usual suspects to come after bolt-action hunting guns. They will take a slice at a time. "Military calibers" may be the first slice. The .50 BMG will have to go. When hunters trade in their .223 rifles for elephant guns; the usual suspects will come after "long-range sniper weapons." A proposed law against .50 rifles mentioned "medium caliber sniping rifles." It did not elaborate on the subject, but clearly a second edition was planned. Scopes will be denounced as unfair and unnecessary for a true sportsman. They will claim that it is only common sense to have hunting guns locked up in the police station and released only for approved hunts in approved areas. The usual suspects will not go away.

I mention this because I saw something written by a claimed shooter declaring that he will never possess a semi-automatic rifle. He declares that his hunting guns are all that anyone should want. He does not think the wolves will eat him last. He does not think they will eat him at all. He does not understand the wolves.

Christian County lawmakers push 2 new firearms bills in the legislature

Two bills in the Missouri legislature would further ease restrictions for gun owners. Representative Jered Taylor and Senator Eric Burlison, who both represent Christian County, introduced the bills.

One of those bills, House Bill 85 and Senate Bill 39 is the Second Amendment Preservation Act. Representative Jered Taylor says this will prevent police and deputies in Missouri from enforcing any federal gun laws-- even if the federal laws become stricter than what they are now.

"We've been told numerous times that Joe Biden is in favor of making changes to the second amendment rights," Representative Jered Taylor says. "With those concerns and concerns that we've had in the past with other presidents, we want to make sure that as Missourians we're protecting that second amendment right."

Owner of Cherokee Firearms Nick Newman says he appreciates what Taylor is trying to do but doesn't know if it'll be able to happen. "In our industry the federal government has the final say about what's allowed and what isn't allowed," Newman says.

While he supports the right to own a gun, Christian County Sheriff Brad Cole worries this legislation could prevent him from working with federal law enforcement to hold people accountable. "We see a lot of offenders that are charged with violent crimes in the state, under state charges, that go to prison and spend a very, very short amount of time in prison before they're released back out into the population," Sheriff Cole says. "Those are the people we're worried about."

The second bill relates to carrying concealed firearms. House Bill 86 and Senate Bill 117 says the of unlawful use of a weapon is committed if someone knowingly carries a concealed firearm into places where signs are posted stating that concealed firearm carrying is off limits and refuses to leave, they can be charged with trespassing.

Newman says some of these "gun free zones" can be problematic. "People go to the mall or they go to their doctors office, they can't carry a gun with them," Newman says. "If you're a CCW holder what do you do? You leave them in your car. So as a criminal then what do you do. That's a great shopping area to go to the hospital parking lots and start breaking into cars because there's a higher profitability of finding something there."

The bill plans to repeal certain statutes of Missouri's concealed carry law that stop a valid permit holder from carrying concealed weapons into any privately owned or some public places. "It should be up to the private property owner what they allow on their private property," Taylor says. "Any of the private property locations in statute I'm removing so casinos, bars, amusement parks, churches, if it's a private school."

Taylor says any public higher education institution can make their own policies about concealed carry weapons on campus, as long as the policies don't generally restrict the ability to carry a concealed weapon.
